Once upon a time they say
There were uncles, parents and grandmothers too
Who lived and shared under a common roof.
It must have been fun with so many around
But then not everyone I guess could have their own room.

Now it's a circle of baby sitters, creches, offices and tutions
But even with the whole family home, it's the T.V. everyone prefers.
There's plenty to do and plenty to talk about
But never with each other in the family, it appears.

Times are changing, they say
Will they change some more
When we grow up too?
