As per Hindu mythology, 'Guru' is always the first and foremost God of yours. God always puts you in right direction though there will be difficulties, but never leaves you alone. This is very true with me and my Guide, Guru and mentor of my doctoral work, Dr. Sirimavo Nair. I express my deepest gratitude and sincere thanks for her valuable guidance, positive reinforcement and immense support in all manners. I am indeed indebted to her for the successful completion of thesis.

I acknowledge the Department of Foods and Nutrition, The Maharaja Sayajirao University of Baroda for providing the infrastructural support.

I am thankful to the University Grants Commission, New Delhi to provide the financial assistance for this research work.

I am very thankful to all the participants for their time and support rendered to carry out this study. They are worthy of special appreciation, for they made the piece of work possible.

I also acknowledge Dr. Vasudev Thakkar for their valuable inputs as and when required during the course of research. I am grateful to Mr. Kamlesh Patel and Archan for training and assistance in HPLC analysis of Foods and Ebbie Thomas for helping me with the statistical analysis.

During the journey of research, I came across some really tough times where the suggestions and support given by my friends - Artidi, Shriyadi, Tanu, Shweta and Pawan was the great help. The technical inputs provided by Juhidi, Kejaldi, Ritu and Vijetadi were so valuable in accomplishment of this research. All of them made this journey a memorable experience. I appreciate and thank all of them from bottom of my heart.

My parents have been my bedrock and nurturers of my abilities and confidence. They have been always inspiring me to aim still higher and there wouldn't have been any of this without them.

I also express gratitude to my Parents-In-law for their being patient, providing unstinted support and showering their blessings on me throughout the journey.

A special thanks to Mitesh and Maulikbhai, for lending a hand and support to fulfill family and social responsibilities and expectations. I cannot forget to thank Arpita and Nutan, for being there.

This would be incomplete without a note of thanks to my husband, Mihir and my son, Neel. Mihir has been a strong pillar of support when I thought I would give up, but he never gave up in me and shape all my significant decisions. I hold him in the highest of respect. Cheering up my life (full of stresses) all way has been my lovely child. He has been a breath of life.
