

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The central idea of this thesis grew out of discussions about the Indian education system with Prof. Amita Verma, who was also my guide. My first thanks, then, are to her - for her interest and enthusiasm. I also owe a great deal to Dr. T.S. Saraswathi whose conceptualization of theoretical issues and analytic approach to the study, I have frequently followed. Though engaged in her own research and writing, she gave her time unstintingly. Her reflections deepened my perspectives. I shall always be grateful for this. I would also like to thank Dr. Veena Mistry, my co-director of the project on "Learning disability" out of which the thinking for this study grew. Acknowledgement is also due to the Research Associates of the same project, Dr.(Mrs.) Amita Govinda and Miss Urvi Shah for their help during the various stages of this study. My typist Mr. M.C. Shah deserves special appreciation. His efficiency and care facilitated the work. I am grateful to the teachers of the Sayajigunj Mishra Shala No.5 whose cooperation was indispensable. I can never emphasise enough my gratitude to the children who participated in this study and made it a reality.

In this quest, my family- mother-in-law, husband and children has been a fountain head of strength. Their moral support, cooperation and enthusiasm made it possible for me to continue and complete this study.
