

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

It was my rare privilege to have Dr. M.B. Buch as my guide for the entire work of this thesis. His encouragement and efficient guidance enabled me to undertake and complete this study in an area that is educationally backward and where the facilities for research in education are quite meagre. I am very much grateful to him for his guidance and help.

When I was accepted as a research student by my guide, Shri Swami Vivekanand Shikshan Sanstha, Kolhapur, kindly and generously permitted me to undertake this study. I deem it my bounden duty to express my sincere gratitude towards my society for this permission.

The testing in the schools would have been impossible but for the help and unreserved cooperation rendered by the head-masters of the various schools. They with their colleagues not only permitted the author and his representatives to carry out the testing but also cooperated in maintaining discipline, while administering the test. I am extremely thankful to them all, for their help and cooperation.

I, being a full-time teacher myself, could not personally visit all the schools during the year for administering the test. This was done by some of associates and experienced teachers who were trained for the purpose. To them I am highly indebted.

I am also very much thankful to those language experts who assisted me in scrutinising the test items and eliminating the defective ones.

My sincere thanks are also due to Shri M.D. Rane, Principal, College of Education, Osmanabad, who was kind enough to go through the manuscripts and who suggested corrections wherever needed.

Lastly, I accord my sincere thanks to all those pupils who enthusiastically cooperated in the testing programme even though it was a new experience to them.

H. K. Khanapurkar.
