

Acknowledgements

I thank all the children, adolescents and adults who participated in this study with great interest and enthusiasm. I deeply appreciate the cooperation of Navrachana School, Vadodara for helping me approach participants, especially in locating adolescents for the second wave of interviews. I am also grateful to the coordinators at Pratham, Vadodara for giving me frequent access to their education centres in slum communities of Vadodara and the opportunity to connect with peer leaders from the communities, who helped establish rapport with families and thus, facilitated the invaluable participation of children from the low socio-economic class. Thanks are also due to adult participants of the study, for accommodating the extensive open-ended interviews in their busy schedules.

I convey my immense gratitude to my mentor and guide, Dr. Rachana Bhangaokar, for her invaluable contributions to this study and my professional growth over the years. Her academic rigor, insistence on maintaining high standards in research, her approachability, and her faith in my abilities have gone a long way in shaping me as a human being and a professional. It has been a pleasure and a great learning experience to present at national and international forums as well as publish our research together. I am indebted to her for her nurturing support and look forward to future professional collaboration with her.

I am grateful to Dr. Lene Arnett Jensen for her gracious help and support throughout my doctoral journey. I thank her for research opportunities that helped me learn the nuances of doing quality research and publishing. I sincerely thank Prof. Shagufa Kapadia for giving me the opportunity to work as a research assistant in a project on moral reasoning, funded by the Indian Council for Social Science Research (ICSSR), New Delhi. This early experience gave significant impetus to my research interests. I feel fortunate to have received the strong support of friends and colleagues in the department. Special thanks are due to my fellow-doctoral candidates, Anushree Gokhale and Zoya Mohammedi for being available whenever I sought help with my project. Their enthusiasm and dedication towards research is motivating. I also thank Bhavika Thakkar and Nidhi Shah for their constant, loving support.

I also extend my sincere gratitude to my parents Sudha and Prakash Pandya, my sister Aditi, my husband Animesh, and my mother-in-law Neelima Aga for giving me the freedom to explore new horizons, for trusting my decisions and for their unflinching love and support through this journey. I also thank my lovely daughter Ananya for inspiring me to give my best in everything I do.