I express my gratitude first and foremost to the Almighty God for his protection and guidance throughout my academic endeavour. I am grateful to various individuals who have assisted me in making this thesis successful. Firstly, my sincere gratitude goes to my supervisor and guide, Prof. Umesh Naik, without whom this work would not have been materialized. I express my gratitude to the Dean of faculty of Arts, Head of the department of Economics and the Department of Economics Research Committee members (DRC) for the critical and creative comments from the very beginning of my study. I wish to acknowledge the contribution of these special people to my academic career. I also thank administrative staff in the department and the head office, Hansa Mehta library staff and all the research colleagues.

Most importantly, I owe gratitude to my parents, sister and husband whose unconditional love, continuous support and encouragement led me to this path. This study would not have been possible without them.
