Conceptual Terminology Used

•	Borderless Democracy	Idea of Borderless Democracy suggests a model of deliberative democracy where different groups are able to negotiate their claims and beliefs. Such model specifically ensures that even those groups and individuals are able to participate in the deliberative processes which are hitherto pushed beyond the territory of public deliberations.
•	Out of Bounds	Idea of out of bounds is a conceptual tool which refers to such groups which are outcasted from the domain of deliberation by the conventional discourse. The concerns of such groups are never considered as the legitimate subject of deliberation.
•	Coerced Invisibility	Coerced invisibility is the spatial impact of out of bounds position of some groups whose claims are ignored and suppressed. Due to such suppression their existence become invisible and insignificant to the conventional discourse.
•	Trichotomy of Public-Private-Personal	It is a conceptual tool proposed to better understand the underexplored are of individuality which often suffers under the aggrandizing interpretation of the conventional public-private dichotomy.
•	Personal Sphere	Personal sphere refers to that sphere of individuality where the restraints of the society does not matter and individual is free to feel or think. It can be understood as an innate sphere of self-expression from where a feeling of self-worth emerges.
•	Top-Down Reform	It is a conceptual tool used to understand the flow of systemic reform from the state structures which eventually flows to the society and kick starts a continuum of reform.
•	Equality as Renegotiation	Equality as renegotiation can be understood as an on-going process where different groups deliberate together around the ideals of equality and liberty to carve an autonomous sphere for themselves while also ensuring that such autonomy does not infringe upon the autonomy of others.
