I am beholden to the Department of History of the Maharaja Sayajirao University of Baroda for shaping my thoughts and preparing myself for the present work. The democratic and academic atmosphere prevailing in the department where all the teachers readily support the genuine students to facilitate the research activity is remarkable. I am thankful to all the teachers for their time to time assistance in this regard. My gratitude to Dr Raj Kumar Hans, my guide, who first supervised and guided my Masters' dissertation and posed difficult questions to challengingly inspire me to take up the studies for the Doctoral dissertation and then accepting to guide it, can not be adequately expressed in words. If he has been constantly challenging my received notions and understandings, he has also been a perennial source of encouragement at all the difficult stages of my work. I am also thankful to Prof. R. J. Shah, the Head of the Department for cheerfully clearing the administrative hurdles.

The work would not have been completed without the financial assistance and support extended by two national bodies, viz. Indian Council for Social Science Research and Indian Council for Historical Research, New Delhi. The two fellowships made the required extensive field work and the archival explorations possible. I am extremely thankful to both the bodies for timely help.

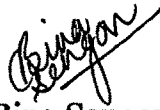

My fieldwork entailed visits to the tribal areas and for days and weeks' extended stays. I visited all the ashrams where I was extended warm welcome and kind hospitality. The kind of open and ready support, help and assistance I received became a major source of my trust in the human cooperation. I must thank Advasi Sewa Samiti, Shamalaji; Apna Ghar, Rajpipla; Arch-Vahini, Mangrol; Anand Niketan Ashram, Rangpur; Bhul Sewa Mandal, Dahod; Dang Swaraj Ashram, Ahwa; Gram Sewa Samaj, Bilpudi; Gram-Nirman, Thava; Lok-Niketan, Ratanpur; Sarvodaya Ashram Sanali; Sarvodaya Parivar Trust, Pindval; Vedchhi Swaraj Ashram, Vedchhi; Bhartiya Adimjati Sevak Sangh, New Delhi and many other organizations for their keen interest and extended support in my work. It was in these institutions that I met noted leaders like Narayan Desai, Kanti Shah, Jagdish Shah, Jinabhai Darji, Bhikhubhai Vyas, Harvilasben Shah, Gandabhai Patel, Ghelubhai Naik, Purnima Pakvasa, Banvari Lal Gaud, Champak Sukhadia, Dr. Anil Patel, Mahendrabhai Bhatt, Jagdish Lakhia, Mansingh Mangrola, Shyam Manohar, Narsinghbhai Hathila, Databhai Bamania, Harisingh Chavda, Pushpaben Chavda, Harivallabh Parikh and others who gave me their time and valuable tips for my research. I am extremely thankful to them. I am also thankful to the numerous tribal men and women of different age groups whom I met during my field trips for offering me some very valuable comments about the reformers. I must specially thank Dasriben Chodhri of Vedchhi and her son Ashok Chodhri who lead the young generation of the tribal community of Gujarat. Lalubhai Vasava of the Dangs was equally helpful. Both Ashok and Lalubhai are tribal themselves and share their roots to the reform activities enunciated by the late Gandhians like Jugatram Dave and Chhotubhai Naik. They gave me a new insight to see to the problem present in the tribal communities of Gujarat.

I am equally indebted to the Baroda State Archives and its zealous staff which never ceased to bear my tantrums of demanding endless series of records. I am also indebted to the staff of Maharashtra State Archives, Mumbai their ready support and guidance. I am also thankful to the staff of Mumbai University Library for placing at my disposal its rich collection of books. I must also thank the National Archives, New Delhi and different Libraries of New Delhi where I got relevant literature. I am also thankful to Gujarat Vidyapith and its Tribal Research and Training Center, Ahmedabad where I began my research work and had valuable discussions with Prof. R. B. Lal, The Centre for Social Studies, South Gujarat University Campus, Surat and its scholars Dr. Dilip Shah and Dr Satyakam Joshi. I shall be failing in my duty if I do not acknowledge the staff of Hansa Mehta Library, MSU, Baroda for bearing with my endless demands for its holdings.

I thank Ms. Shakuntala Hans for her constant encouragement and typing my long chapters with expertise very few people match. I also thank Adhya Madam for her help and suggestions at the last stage of the thesis preparation. I must also thank all my friends who stood by me through my periods of frustration. Many thanks to several other friends who could not be mentioned by their names but who have shared the joys and sorrows in the making of the present work. Above all I am beholden to my parents and siblings who have been bravely putting up with all my craziness and my creating mess all around the house. However, I am solely responsible for any error and failings found in the dissertation.
