

- ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS -

First and foremost, I wish to place on record my ever spontaneous and profound sense of gratitude towards my guiding teacher, Dr.(Mrs.) Premilla Maitra. It is no exaggeration when I state that I have always held Dr. Maitra in the highest esteem which one can have only for one's 'Professional ego ideal'. She not only motivated me to undertake experimental research (which is rather uncommon in Social Work discipline) but was always there when I needed her. It has indeed been a momentous experience to complete my studies under her erudite guidance. Next, I am heavily indebted to Dr. H.M. Rajyaguru, earlier a Reader at Faculty of Social Work, whom I used to consult every now and then for his expertise in Social Work Research. Anytime I felt unsure regarding a technical matter he was the one who suggested the most convincing solutions. The present study would have been literally impossible without the continuous consultancy and logistics support extended so very kindly by Dr. Sagun Desai (Pharmacologist) and Dr. Anita Kothiala, (Paediatrician) both from Medical College, Baroda. Words fail me to express adequately the gratitude I feel towards Mr J.C. Sharma, Reader and In-charge-EDP Section, Tata Inst. of Social Sciences, Bombay, for the consultancy in Statistics and electronic data processing provided by him in my work. I must also acknowledge the support provided by the Indian Council of Social Science Research for sanctioning me a research grant covering full cost of computerized analysis of my data at TISS, Bombay.

All through the period of my doctoral work, Mr K.M. Sharma, Mr. I.P. Shelat, Dr. I.M. Patel, Dr. H.M. Rajyaguru, Dr. V.N. Anjaria and Mr. S.B. Saxena have helped in numerous ways in their respective appointment of the Dean or the Head of the Department at this faculty. I am sincerely grateful to them all. Similarly, my family members who had to face the worst whenever I was overworked and tired, must be thanked too. In fact, without the constant support and encouragement from my husband Col. S.M. Joshi and my sons Umang, Tarang this study might not have been complete in good time as it happens to be today.

Last but not the least my profuse thanks are due towards Ms. Dipikaben Lakdawala and Hav/SK Tech P.Raja Mani for the draft and final typing of the thesis report.
