ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

In completing this dissertation I have received the generous assistance, support, and encouragement of many people, friends, colleagues and relatives. I should first and foremost like to express my gratitude to the late Prof. S. C. Misra who gave me the opportunity to work on this subject by offering me a research fellowship under the special assistance programme of the Department of History, M.S.University ; also for agreeing to be my guide. Unfortunately Prof. Misra died, after a brief illness in september 1984, before I could begin the difficult task of writing down my findings.

I am specially grateful to Prof. M. N. Desai, the Vice Chancellor, M.S.University, who gave me reason to continue my work by permitting me to submit the thesis under the self-guidance scheme of the University and Mr. Pepalla, former President, Baroda University Teacher's Association for strength and moral support when I needed them most.

I received considerable help from my friends and colleagues in the Department of History. I do not have enough words to express my thanks to Iftikhar for his sincere involvement in my work and for spending many a long hour in going through the manuscript and making valuable ammendments. Ravindra helped me greatly with his encouragement, and valuable comments on some chapters.

I cannot forget the friendship of Salim who stood by me unfliningly in my days of financial difficulties ; and also Janak and Parmindar, both abroad, for financial assistance.

I am thankful to the staff of Maharashtra State Archives, Bombay, who provided me every thing I asked for, promptly and with a sense of professional duty. The staff of Smt. Hansa Mehta Library, M.S.University of Baroda, deserve a special mention for their co-operation at all times.

The thesis could not have been completed without the cheerful companionship of my wife Shakuntala and the strength she provided, not to speak of the several drafts of the thesis typed by her. My son Akash enthused me with new spirit by his playfulness and fun. My parents, without being persons of letters, have always encouraged me in my "wise" task. I can never pay back what they have given me by their toil, love and sacrifice.

Last but not the least, I am thankful to my friend Mukul Patel who suggested the idea of getting the thesis to the computer. His associates Nikitin, Vyas and Yatin have worked together to give it fine look in a very short time. In particular I cannot forget Dhruv Vyas for his painstaking involvement in the job. Friends Ajay Saxena and Ashok Sethi also helped in the final printouts. I am thankful to them.

Baroda : 16th April, 1987.
