A student of Psychology of personality is bound to get stuck-up at the unresolved problems of personality measurement. For example, a personality questionnaire is sensitive to some manipulable variables. Different testers, surroundings, sets, forms of the questionnaires, different instructions, response categories tend to influence the objectivity of the responses of the subject during the course of personality measurement. It was at this point a need was felt to study some problems of personality testing which is the content of this work.

Obviously, a work of this nature cannot be an exclusive result of the efforts of a single person. There are many people and agencies who have assisted me in the process of development and execution of this study. Foremost of them is my guide Dr.A.S.Patel, Professor and Head of the Department of Psychology,

Faculty of Education and Psychology, The M.S.
University of Baroda. His painstaking interest and encouragement have helped me in overcoming the intellectual problems as well as withstanding the impact of deeply frustrating experiences during the course of the study. No words can sufficiently express my gratitude towards him. I wish to thank the Principals and students of the various schools where my field work was carried out. I am also thankful to the University Grants Commission for the much needed financial support.
