
CONTENTS	PAGE
- ACKNOWLEDGEMENT	ii
- CONTENTS	iv
- ABBREVIATIONS AND REFERENCES	viii
- KEY TO TRANSLITERATION	ix
 CHAPTER
I : INTRODUCTION.....	1 - 19
1.0. Introductory
1.2. Importance of Psychology
1.3. Indian Psychology
1.4. Present-day need in a nutshell
1.5. Some Useful References
1.6. Choice of the subject
1.7. Title of the present investigation
1.8. The aims and objects of the study
1.9. Methodology adopted
1.10. A Glance at the chapters
1.11. Nature of this research
1.12. Summary
II : CHARAKA, SUSHRUTA AND THEIR TIMES.....	20 - 50
2.1. Introductory
2.2. Analysis
2.3. Historical Background necessary
2.4. Importance of History of Medicine
2.5. Antiquity of Indian Medicine
2.6. Scientific Approach
2.7. Ayurveda and Its Sources
2.8. Milestones in Indian Medicine
2.9. Creative and Scientific period
2.10. Charaka
2.11. Sushruta
2.12. Main signs of the times
2.13. Summary
III : SCIENCE AND PHILOSOPHY OF AYURVEDA ...	51 - 88
3.1. Introductory
3.2. Analysis
3.3. The Aim, Purpose and Scope of Ayurveda

CHAPTER	PAGE
3.4. Status and State of Philosophy then
3.5. Relation between Philosophy and Science.
3.6. Permanent relation between philosophy and psychology.
3.7. Ayurveda as a Science
3.8. The Philosophical Background.
3.9. Sankhya.
3.10. Nyaya-Vaisheshika.
3.11. Charaka's Philosophy
3.12. Summary
IV : CONCEPT OF MIND IN AYURVEDA.....	89 - 139
4.1. Introductory
4.2. Analysis of the Ayurvedic concept Regarding Mind.
4.3. Life and Mind - a Configurational view.
4.4. Soul or the Self
4.5. The Nature of mind.
4.6. The Senses.
4.7. Three functions of the mind
4.8. Perception and Cognition.
4.9. Conation, Emotion and Motivation.
4.10. Dream, Sleep etc.
4.11. Sushruta's Concept of Mind.
4.12. Discipline of the Mind.
4.13. Contribution and Summary
V : PSYCHOSOMATICS IN AYURVEDA.....	140 - 174
5.1. Introductory
5.2. Analysis of the subject
5.3. Philosophic Derivation
5.4. Psychosomatic Concept
5.5. Comparison with Modern Approach
5.6. Psychosomatics in Etiology
5.7. Allopathic Etiology Compared 5.8. Abode Diseases
5.9. Types of Diseases
5.10. Therapy also Psychosomatic
5.11. Contribution and Summary

CHAPTER	PAGE
VI : PHYSIO-PSYCHOLOGICAL PRINCIPLES AND OTHER ASPECTS.....	175-209
6.1. Introductory
6.2. Analysis of the subject
6.3. Configurational Approach
6.4. Derivation of Tridhatu Principle
6.5. Tridosha Principle
6.6. Nervous System
6.7. Constitution
6.8. Food and Taste
6.9. Rasa and Ojas
6.10. Contribution and Summary
VII : THE PROBLEM OF SEX IN AYURVEDA	210-242
7.1. Introductory
7.2. Analysis of the Subject
7.3. Goals of Normal Sex-life
7.4. Abnormalities Due to Sex
7.5. Role of Repression and Restraint in Mental Life.
7.6. The Place and Possibilities of Sublimation.
7.7. Special Problems
7.8. Ayurveda's Approach to Mental Health
7.9. Contribution and Summary
VIII : THE NORMAL AND THE ABNORMAL.....	243-282.
8.1. Introductory
8.2. Analysis
8.3. Normality
8.4. Modern Concept of Normalcy
8.5. Comparison and Contrast
8.6. The Abnormal
8.7. Insanity and Its Types
8.8. Differences in Approach
8.9. Symptoms of Insanity
8.10. Etiology of Abnormalities
8.11. Other Causes and Comparison
8.12. Cures
8.13. Conclusion and Summary

CHAPTER	PAGE
IX : DIAGNOSIS AND THERAPY.....	283-306
9.1. Introductory
9.2. Analysis
9.3. Prevention and Diagnosis
9.4. Psychic Therapy
9.5. Psychic Measures
9.6. Right Course
9.7. Conclusion and Summary
X : AN INTEGRATED THEORY.....	307-330
(DISTINCTIVE FEATURES AND LIMITATIONS)
10.1. Introductory
10.2. A Retrospective Glance
10.3. Analysis
10.4. Integrated Theory and Its Contribution
10.5. Distinctive Features
10.6. Resurgence and Historical Values
10.7. Limitations
10.8. Scope of Further Research
10.9. Revival of Ayurveda
10.10. Contribution and Summary
APPENDIX : PARAPSYCHIC CONTENTS.....	331-336
BIBLIOGRAPHY.....	337-346

