

TEST OF SIMILARITY

1. The test of similarity is a statistical test used to determine if two samples are drawn from the same population. It is based on the principle that if two samples are similar, they should have similar characteristics.

2. The test of similarity is a non-parametric test, meaning it does not require the data to be normally distributed. It is often used when the data is categorical or when the distribution is unknown.

